Team Gallery is hosting an exhibition, titled 'The Love Object', on view through February 18, 2017.

Organized by Tom Brewer, the group show features works by artists Zoe Barcza, Allison Branham, Brice Dellsperger, Jenny Holzer, Laura Hunt, Christian Jankowski, Hanna Liden, Alissa McKendrick, Sam Samore, Heji Shin and Georgia Wall. The works on view by these artists, both individually and collectively, do not attempt to define love, but explores love's ever-changing character, its frequently antithetical incarnations, which range from sexual attraction to simple admiration, familiar tenderness to remote worship, pleasure to pain. The exhibition examines through love's abstract characteristics, its non-rigid construct, encapsulating any combination of commonplace feelings including intimacy, empathy, desire and obsession. Despite their diverse backgrounds, the artists in this exhibition came together in a show not only to share on the subject of love, but also on a denial for verbal and pictorial sleekness and austerity, with their uninhibited artworks.

The exhibition is on view at Team (gallery, inc.), 83 Grand Street, New York, NY 10013, USA.
