

Pronunciation Optional: TEARS at Team Gallery

January 11, 2018

Tonight, at SoHo's Team Gallery, Mark Verabioff will be opening his solo show, titled, TEARS. Being a woman is so political these days.

Mark Verabioff's bristling imagery provides glimpses of the polished modern female, as per fashion photography, beset on all sides by the randomness and inelegant nonsense of modernity, history, politics, and the artist's hand itself.

There is a harsh, bright energy that runs through Verabioff's work which finds form in his poignantly bleak aesthetic and presents an astute position as politically articulate as it is visually interesting. Take a gander at his mantra for this show: "concerned women for america rim glue pour cultural confinement rundowns poolside." Glamorous? Disgusting? Magical? Harrowing? All of the above.
